“ Such tragic news. My greatest sympathies to the Yee family. I remember Brynner from both Lockhart JH and Edgewater High School. Brynner was a bit of a character in his own right. And I recall he was voted most unchanged at our 10-year high school reunion. He was a very kind person.

May God bless you and your family during these sad times.

“ Brynner,
Still a baby, I once met. When a man, I corresponded with. Now you have proceeded before us to the Eternal Home where we will all eventually return. You are not alone there. We are sure that you are getting re-acquainted with Grandpa, Grandma and Uncle Alex somewhere over a cup of Chinese tea.
Love and peace always,

“ Brynner was my oldest child. When he was born, we were very happy. We had a child to carry the family name. He was a happy child, who liked to play with his friends all the time. At the time, he didn't like school, and had bad grades. One day, he had a serious talk with me. He told me he would change completely, in order to have a good future. That was at the end of seventh grade. A few years later, he got all A's during his last year of high school. After high school, he went to UCF, and made a few close friends over the years. He knew what he wanted and worked hard for it. I am so proud of him and his accomplishments.

“ I first met Brynner at UCF. I thought of him as a rather quirky guy. He was always coming up with some random analysis to explain the little mysteries of life, yet on the other end of the spectrum calculating ways for maximum efficiency, profit or yield. It is my opinion that Brynner was very deliberate in the way that he lived his life, preferring to leave as little as possible to chance. It seems that this served him rather well in his career. Where most people have to pay to travel, he was getting paid to travel in his consulting gigs, seeing many different cities and countries on a rather nice per diem. I think one thing that anyone who knew Brynner would say is that his heart was generally in the right place. From many conversations with him over the years, I can attest that he was constantly looking out for opportunities for his friends. Unlike myself, Brynner was not really prone to sarcasm. It almost seemed as if he had no appreciation of it at all when I first met him. I guess he learned to appreciate (or at least tolerate) it, since we were friends for so many years. I will miss the "Yeah, yeah, yeah" and the smile of recognition in letting me have my little joke. My life was enriched by his friendship. My best wishes to his family members during this time.

“ I first met Brynner back in the 90s at a church ski trip. We became good friends after that and when I first moved out of my parents home he rented me out a room near UCF at the frat house. Over the years we kept in contact here and there. I will truly miss him as a friend.

“ I met Brynner at UCF, and we also worked together at Oracle. He was a professional mentor to me as he blazed the path in the career I pursued, and he offered great advice and guidance along the way. But we were more than just classmates and colleagues; we also had a personal friendship. I enjoyed many conversations with him as we shared common perspectives on many subjects. But most importantly, we had a shared faith. I now draw from our our shared faith in Jesus and the hope that He promises: that this is not the end!

“ Brynner was my older brother and I will miss him. I remember when we were children and he was the brave and adventurous one. We took the fun yet dangerous routes to school. We dangled from little cliffs , ran from scary dogs, zipped down little hills sometimes just missing cars as they sped by. We would swing like monkeys from one door to the other in my parent's room. I'll remember him as that fun and daring brother. When he graduated college he left for his own adventures. But 9 years ago he came back to live in Orlando and be with the family. I really thought we would have longer with him. Brynner you are loved and will be missed!
