“ To My Dear Cousins Freddy Eileen and Yami and especially to my Titi iraida. I simply have no words to express the sorrow I am feeling for you all at this time of loss. My heart is heavy knowing the pain you must all be feeling. I know there are no words that can ever serve to console you as I cannot ever imagine what it may feel like to lose one of my siblings, a child, a Mother.. For no matter what differences we may all have with one another, our Love is so much stronger and is our everlasting bond no matter what. I hope that the beautiful and happy memories of Cindy help to comfort you during this difficult time. I pray for your strength and your healing. Today as we bid Cindy a farewell and for the days to come We All stand by your side to love you through this and to give you whatever support you need. Love you..Dorean

“Baby Chrissy” the doll, that’s who you will always be to me. Mom still has her at home so you will always be close by. The always smiling, laughing full of life cousin that adored her family is how I remember you. Being surrounded by family was what made you the happiest, especially when your beloved mother, brother and sister were all together. You held a special place in my mothers heart and do so in mine. My mothers stories from the past of you are the fondest, she loved watching you and dressing you up as a baby saying how beautiful you were. You were full of life and always had love to give. Thank you for talking to Zac and for always playing with Zoey. She loved you. We will miss you and always love you. Rest in peace and watch over us. Kiss mami tita and Titi for us.

“ Cindy,

My beautiful, wonderful, sister. My fondest memories of my childhood will ALWAYS be tied to you. Although we are only 11 months apart, we were as different from each other as fire and rain. But somehow we loved and cared for each other throughout our lives. Our mother loved her children deeply, but you were the Special love of her life, and she yours. You had a bond that was more than mother/daughter, you were like sisters, best friends and confidantes. I was jealous, but I understood, I had the same bond with my Mami Tita.

When we were little, I recall you screaming and yelling outside the tenement windows when you saw mom go out for an evening of socialization- you thought she was never coming back. I comforted you and we had each other.

You always said that I was your opposite, I was smart in school (you called me a brainiac) and you thought you were dumb- but only in school. You were “street smart”, I was “book smart”. In school, I did your homework so you wouldn’t get in trouble, but you HATED school. I would walk with you to school, walk in one door and afterwards, you would walk out another door to play “hookey”. You were so anxious to grow up and experience life so early in years. I was so scared to do the things you did, you were a free spirit and I was not- I did what I was told to do, I was the obedient one. You liked chocolate ice cream, I liked vanilla. And I loved you for the way you were. You were a survivor and your struggles in life triggered my compassion for you even more. I worried about you and always hoped you would change your ways. But you found my life and where I lived, boring and you needed excitement everyday, drama everyday to feel alive. I couldn’t understand, I was the dumb one.

I know that your sudden departure has left an enormous tear in our hearts, but, I find comfort that you are finally resting at peace, without any more pain.

I'll miss you forever!! And love you even more!

“ My cousin Cindy, I have so many memories of her throughout my life, as a child she was my savior, she spoiled me even more than my Mami Tita (like if that were possible), I was her first baby, when I had my “tantrums” she would drive all the way from Queens to pick me up in the Bronx, my memories of Cindy go back from the age of three to my present life and her love was so unconditional. She gave so freely without expecting anything in return. Cindy was the life of every party, especially at our family functions; everyone who met her, loved her instantly; no matter if it was Christmas, Thanksgiving, a Wedding, or just a family BBQ, she was always present being who she was best (herself); she loved to party, dance, drink, and sing; she had such a contagious laugh that infected all who crossed her path. I would ask her Cindy, when are you going to retire, give up on the party scene? Her response was Aishita, (as she only called me) I am too young to retire, she would always tell me, “I still feel like I am too young to stop partying”, besides I would be too bored with a normal life. Cindy loved her family like no other person I know, she accepted all of us with our faults and virtues, if any of us did anything to hurt her, she would quickly forget that she was mad and keep on as if nothing, she didn’t hold grudges at all. On Sunday you were called “home” unexpectedly; and I had the privilege of being there one final time. One thing I am certain of is that not only myself, but the rest of our family will miss you profoundly and that your memory will be kept alive at all of our future family functions, rest assure that one fine day we shall all meet again and we will continue to party like only you knew how to! Tomorrow we will celebrate you like I know you would have wanted to, with all of your Family and some Friends, with music, and a few shots in between; I love you dearly, but (shhhhh) I always have. No more pain and suffering, rest in peace Cindy this is your time!! Love you forever, Aishita

“ The one constant memory I have of my cousin Cindy, is that no matter how much time would pass since we would see each other, every time I saw her she was always smiling always so lively and the life of the party. She was always happy to be around family. She had such an endearing and jovial spirit almost child-like and you couldn't help but smile and laugh when you were around her. I think I speak for all of us when I say that despite this tragic loss, we rejoice in knowing that your were received not only by God our loving Father but also by our beloved Mami Tita, Titi Haydee, Diana and so many other family members who left us to join the ranks to become our family's own "Army of Angels" sent to protect us all. Rest in peace Prima. You will be missed dearly.. Dorean
