“ Corey, I only knew you for 2 years but we shared many great times. I am glad we had the opportunity to meet and I will be holding things down with Deatrick here, this is not easy for him for sure, I know you know how much he loved you, you were so much of his life and those memories will live in forever. I thank you for always being there to straighten your cousin when he needed it. Watch over us till our day comes. And you have my permission to kick Deatrick in the butt from time to time when you know it's needed. Love you cuzzo!

“ I'm not a doll fan but when it came to you I was... Stealing your hat and all because you knew I'd keep fins up via bear claws. God knows we didn't have enough time but I cherish every moment over the last few years we were able to spend. I'm lucky to call you mine and even more lucky that I had a man that loved me unconditionally. We never could stay away from each other. True love is hard to find but I'm lucky that I did find you every day is a struggle now that you are gone but I can hear you yelling at me saying stop that. You always gave everything you had full hearted anyone that crossed paths with you was lucky. You told me we were forever and it was cut way short. I will think about you daily and forever miss you your face your touch your voice your laugh everything until the day we meet again my sweet angel. I love you and miss you

“ I remember Corey doing the worm on the floor in his Michael Jackson pants in kindergarten like it was yesterday. One of the funniest guys I've ever know. I feel privileged to have known him and he will surely be missed.

My deepest sympathy to his family and friends. RIP Corey

Can't believe your gone so soon, I'm devastated that I will never see you again, I will miss my cousin/brother who I will always love deep in my heart. I will always remember the times we shared and had from childhood through adult years. I loved to be around you which we always had a great time. you will always be in my thought until eternity. Missing you in the flesh but will see you again in the spirit. I LOVE YOU CUZO! #thatsreal #onelove

“ I’m truly saddened to think you’ll never know how much I truly appreciate it... I appreciate pushing me so hard to be the woman I am today ...you taught me courage. You taught me that if it didn’t work the first time to try again. You taught me to except nothing less than what I deserved you showed me what love was by loving me unconditionally and excepting me whatever I was going through. You showed me how a family was supposed to function and how to get up in the morning on A Saturday and be productive and I miss the sound of the microwave beeping at 8 AM on a Saturday with your coffee being warmed up .. and you threatening any boy who ever looked my way 😭💔 . I miss you laughing at how funny I was and always agreeing with me even though no one thought i was as funny as you did . i’ll miss your singing in the car and I’ll miss the way you call my name and the way you’re so proud of me even when i achieved the littlest things. i can’t really imagine life without you in it .. and i just pray that you walk with me everyday along the journey

“ The best father anyone could ask for 🌍❤️ It hasn't really hit me yet... But I know when it does it's gonna hurt really bad. It is amazing how someone can love you with every breath they have in their body and do anything for you this was a man who would give me everything he had to make me happy . I don't really know how our family can ever be the same but I do know that we will continue to push and strive towards our goals which you would want us to do! I love you 💕 so much save us some spots up there

I'm going to miss him so much. We didn't talk often, but when we did we made up for lost time. We'd be on the phone for hours. And I would fuss at him about not calling me more often, and he would laugh and say, "auntie that works both ways, you can call me." Oh, how I wish I could call him now. We would always end every conversation with I love you. I love you Corey
