“ Just saw Scott Bakula which reminded me of his father which reminded me of Mr. Frantel. I worked in the word processing department of Seven-Up and will never forget him. Once when I was manning phones for the annual balloon race I had to take my 2 year-old daughter with me. She started crying while I was taking a call. Mr. Frantel, President and CEO of Seven-Up picked her up, walked her around the center and calmed her, snotty nose and all. I've loved him every since....Norma J. Dellard

I worked at 7up from 1981 to 1986. I was just a building engineer. I went outside to out in front of the building for my lunch break. I started talking to this man he was very nice. We talked about general stuff. I went back inside my lunch was over. Someone came to me and said do you know who you were talking to? I said no, the said that was the CEO of 7up. I never forgot that moment.
