“ My Grandmother is Betty DaDalt as most know her. Born Isabella Elizabeth Belmont in New Britton Connecticut, to (an Italiano family,) Rocco A Belmont and Ana C Belmont on December 2, 1929, later had her name changed to Elizabeth Isabella Belmont.

She was an amazing, caring woman who always meant well. I, being her 1st born granddaughter remember things about my life with my grandmother and even stories she told me no one has heard. My grandpa Walter DaDalt was an unbelievably caring and amazing man also. Especially towards her. They both hold a special place in my heart, meant a lot to me, and taught me much and stayed true to tradition.

My grandmother taught me to hold on to my Catholic faith and upbringing all my life. And to this day, I'm a practicing Catholic. God was her stronghold, as he is mine today. I will miss my grandmother dearly, and never forget all the questions I never had a chance to ask her and have her answer. She may have come across harsh at times, due to her strong-willed personality. LOL but those closest to her, in those that knew her well, understand that she always meant well from the bottom of her heart.

She left behind three children. Geraldine Vetre, Jacqueline Painter and her youngest, Mark Malawka. Also a step-daughter Patty Schlamel. She also left behind two granddaughters, Sara Tiffany Patton and Jenna Elizabeth Nieves. (Whom Elizabeth was named after her). She left behind 8 great-grandchildren, (2 of which, her 1st and last, carries Elizabeth in her name also) will never forget you Gramma. And will always be grateful for all that was given to me by you. You will remain in my heart in a special place, and I know God has a special place for you also.
