“ Jim was a gentleman and a professional who guided many at work. He was very affable and had a calming influence, no matter what the challenges were. You could always count on Jim. To be supportive, a part of the team, committed, reliable and understanding. What we strive to be. I am fortunate to have known him and express my deepest sympathies to his family. Sincerely, Joe Ozalas.

“ Jim was a mentor and a friend to me personally. Jim was a kind and understanding man. He took a chance on our architectural firm. We went above and beyond for him and he began to trust us and that led to a great great relationship. We saw that after the trust was there, Jim was loyal to us something that is so rare nowadays almost non existent. Jim was smart and patient he let people be free and he accomplished great things without threatening people. Jim had a confidence and a peace about him that was contagious. Jim assembled an army of people to work together and inspired people to do their best without micromanaging. He was the kind of leader that people would almost give their life for because you knew he cared about you as an individual. When he said something he meant it, he had integrity...

We will see him again because I know he was a man of faith. We had conversations about these things. Heaven is not earned, it's free by the faith of Roman's 10:9-10. And as a result 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18 it's very comforting, look it up. Until then... we will carry-on. Jim will always be remembered as a great one! We love Jim.

“ Jim was more than just a business associate, he became a friend. He took a chance on my firm to provide design services and we are very grateful to this day. But again, it became more than just business. One great thing about Jim is that he had an art to say few words that would hold a lot of weight. I am inspired and encouraged by people who have that art ... as well, the confidence he had in me to help, drive and execute in any situation whether personal or business was a great trait Jim had there are many people out there doing what he did but very few have the heart, care, giving and tenacity Jim had to carry through all to success. I am really grateful to have known Jim.
