“Manny always had something funny to say. He always made me laugh. Manny was the type of person you could talk to for hours on the phone about everything. I remember talking to him until morning. Manny always cared for others, he helped others and even when things weren't going his way or he was unhappy, he never showed it. He always made sure everyone around him was happy. He was a hard worker also. I remember him coming to my house after work and him washing himself up in the kitchen sink and me getting annoyed but now I think back at it like just funny memories. He helped me pack a couple weeks ago. Helped me fold clothes and everything. He was so helping and caring and we just talked for hours. I miss you manny. always and forever much love. xoxo

“ This is for those who attended the memorial, I had to give my Eulogy in English so this is for those who didn't understand and want to translate it themselves to Spanish.

Thank you all for coming to my brothers funeral. If you are here it is because at one point you were in one way or another touched by Manny's essence, his humor, his free spirit and his huge heart.

Manny was my brother, my confidante, my best friend, my rock. I remember that when anything good happened in my life he would be the first person that I couldn't wait to tell. I would run home and tell him because he would be the one person that would celebrate and be happier for me than even I was. He would jump up and down and yell at the top of his lungs and be so excited for me. He loved me so much and I him....

I will always love him.

His good nature was contagious. He would help the neighbor rescue cats, he would listen to everyone's problems without judging them and go out of his way to be of help even when at times he was the one that needed the most help, he did everything he could to make me laugh when I was feeling down and just listen to me when I needed to vent. He was the life of the party, and the light of my heart.

My fondest memory of Manny was when we went to cocoa beach a few months ago. The water was still cold and none of our friends wanted to go in but he went in with me

We were swimming in the water and body surfing through the waves. I will always remember him the way he looked in that moment. He loved life so much... he just kept smiling and laughing and his eyes were glittering in the sun. We went out to dinner and listened to our favorite songs and took so many pictures. He stopped some strangers to take some pictures of us and we ended up talking to them for about 20 minutes about the beauty of life and how blessed we were to be back in each others life after being apart for so many years, he would tell me that he always knew we would be the best friends and we were. He will always be my best friend.

I remember when he was teaching me to longboard I was so scared , I didn't wanna let go of his hand and he would tell me it's okay to fall Lina, you'll fall and you'll get back up and it'll hurt for a few but it's okay. He would say that for everything, it's gonna be okay. And I try to imagine him saying that now...It'll be okay.

The only person that knew all of my flaws, virtues, all of my insecurities and still called me beautiful, still talked about me as if I was a rare diamond. But it was him, he was the rare one for seeing beauty in every single person and thing. I'm so blessed to have known him.

I know deep down in my heart that Manny is in a better place, so I cry selfishly because I'm going to miss him knocking on my door just to ask me how my day went. Just to say I love you. His last words to me were I love you and my last words to him were I love you too. I wish I could have held him tighter and longer. I know we all do. But when he told me I love you he really meant it and I felt it in my heart and all the love that's in this room right now I know that where he's at he can feel

Manny was the kind of man that if he only had one bag of chips he would give you half. If you needed a place he would give you his bed. His loyalty and love to his girlfriend was what any woman would only dream of having, he loved his family so much and he was the best brother God could have given me,

I truly believe that our essence is something beyond these skin and bones... the soul transcends.

Manny is not here in his physical but he will forever live in my heart as one of the sweetest and most caring souls that I will ever have the pleasure of having in my life.

I'm so grateful for all the joy he brought to me, my friends and my family. The memories I've shared with him will be treasured forever.

If I could tell him one last thing I would tell him that you are more than enough bro. You've shown me how to love myself, how to find beauty in myself, you've given me so much strength. You inspired and motivated me every single day. Your body will be gone but you are going to live in me forever and I will tell my kids about you and you will live in them and I will keep you alive within me until I get to meet you in heaven and we will hold hands and laugh together again. I love you so much

“ I loved Manny dearly. My house was open to him any time. He was friends with my grandson Jesse and granddaughter Raini. Whenever he would see me in Winn Dixie or anywhere, he would yell, Hey Grandma! and come and talk to me. I will miss him very much. God has an angel with him now.
