“ Maggie

We started off as just the crazy Disney coworkers and then you became my family being an older sister to me. I could always rely on you for advice with peanut, hunting sales, and going on our Dave Ramsey debt free journey together. I am so grateful for how thoughtful and kind you were. You truly were a gift from God and made an impact on everyone who got to know you. I am just sorry we didn't get to make it to Disney next month for our stay at AKL like we planned. I love you Maggie and am going to miss you dearly. Don't worry we will watch over Jason & Julian. ☐

“ Margarita- my crazy wonderful friend. Meeting you at 17 we came be instant buds. An unlikely pair. You were like a big sister to me. Driving me around going on little adventures and even being my roommate. We were there for each other during some very hard times when we couldn't let the world know our problems. I will never forget when you came back from Colombia and snuck into my bed- I remember waking up and just being so happy to see you but knowing something was different. That dang nose piercing that changed sides! You telling me I was crazy but then finally admitting I was right and that I knew you too well! A story we would laugh about for years. Over the years we remained close even though life took us in opposite directions. By date we both managed to moved up north (and back) at roughly the same times. Life continued as it does and we weren't alway able to see each other or talk as much as we would like. But when we did it was like no time had passed. I miss you friend. I miss your crazy laugh and your way of telling a story. I miss your willingness to help out others and put them before yourself. I miss you so much and I love you. I pray you will be a Guardian Angel looking after the boys and Ed. Rest In Peace mama. ❤️❤️❤️

“ She was my ride or die... no matter where on earth we were, whether 3000 miles apart on opposite side of the country or living together in a 4th floor walk up in NYC. 30 years of being her “sista from another mista” ... now she’s taking a giant chunk of my heart with her. She can hold it for me until we meet again! 💔 I love you 4Everrrrr
