“ I am at a huge loss of words right now. Michelle and I were friends from a long time ago. We actually dated back in Chicago, when we were young maybe 18-19 yrs old.

We kept in touch every now and then over the years and i remember one day we called each other up and we're talking on the phone. She was joking and just reminiscing about stories from our past. and I just remember her saying how we practically grew up together. Which we did. We shared so many memories together, so many moments and experiences that I will never forget.

Fast forward years later I moved to Orlando and today I went to look her up online. I couldn't find her on Facebook or Instagram so I did a google search. I came across this and my heart is just broken. I can't believe it's true. I really can't. I'm so sad and just in overall shock. I have so many questions. I really wish I knew what happened. I pray for her daughter Genesis. I can't imagine how she's getting through this. Losing my own mother 8 years ago still hurts me.

I doubt her daughter would remember me because she was very young the couple of years we dated, but if she ever reads this, I just want to say, your mom was such a beautiful person. She was such a good friend to me and I'm really sorry for whatever happened. I'm grateful that I got to share a piece of her story and those memories I had with Michelle, I'll never forget. Life is so short and I'm honestly having a hard time writing this. If you ever need something feel free to look me up. God bless and always remember the good memories.

“ Genesis,
May you see Gods light on the path ahead^[SEP]when it gets dark.May you hear even in your hour of sorrow the singing of God’s love.
When times are hard may it never turn your heart to stone.^[SEP]Always remember that You do not walk alone.
Love Never Dies it lives in you forever.
You carry all the beauty of Michelle’s love. May God Bless you and fill you with His peace and His strength.
