

Nathen Clyve Spencer

April 20, 1986 - September 21, 2020

He was a kind, giving, free spirit. Material things were never a priority, though he cherished the few memories he travelled with. He considered himself a wanderer.

He was known for his unique spirit and his diligent work ethic. Nate had strong feelings about “the system” we live in, and preferred to live by his moral code instead. He gathered strays along the way, not animals, but people - the underdogs of “society,” the lost souls. They became his friends and he became their protector.

He is survived by grandparents, father, mother, aunt, uncles, brother, sister, an 8-year-old daughter, a child arriving in February, and dear friends. Nate often referred to himself as The Wind, so now when we feel a strong wind or a soft breeze, we can know his free spirit is still with us.

Tribute Wall

“ Je vais montrer la photo de Nathen à ma mère=Eugénie Delage,toutes nos sympathies à la famille! Louis Pelletier.

---

Louis Pelletier - November 17, 2020 at 03:16 PM

FC

“ I was just remembering how when I was young, Nate (my big brother) would ride his bike with me on the pegs, and how great he was at bmx tricks. He was there to help me up after my first failed attempt at ramping my own bicycle, and showed me the way. He always cheered me on in failure and triumph.

---

Felicia Coppinger - October 08, 2020 at 09:23 PM