“ Hi Daddy,

I still can't believe that you're gone. It's now been more than a year since you passed away, but that doesn't mean the hole in my heart has closed up or become any smaller. I'm taking the healing process day by day, and I do my best to smile through all the difficulties of life just like you did. Even though I can never hug you or hear your voice again, the memories you left behind provide me with bittersweet motivation. I miss you, daddy. I miss having someone to talk to, someone to relate to and feel safe and happy with. I miss our casual bickering and your history lessons and silly questions that showed you cared for me. I miss your smile and I miss feeling like I had a place to belong when you were with me.

I'm lonely without you. I'm depressed without you. You were right, I would shed tears forever when you would pass away. You were right about everything, and I wish time had given you a few more days to live so I could appreciate your wisdom and appreciate you.

...There's so much I want to say to you, but so little words that are possible to convey the meanings.

I've always believed it's not possible to speak to the dead, but here I am writing a letter to one. A letter I know I can never complete.

*Your best friend,
Perla (Daddy's little girl)*

“ Hi, daddy. It's been a long time, hasn't it? Not a day goes by that you aren't on my mind. I'm eternally shedding tears and mourning for you, but I still smile and go on with my days as you would have wanted me to. There have been a lot of blessings in life recently, and it's upsetting to know that you aren't here to share the joy of them with us, but I like to believe that you sent them to us while watching down on us from up in heaven. I graduated just like you always wanted me to. All of the years that you spent supporting me throughout high school have not gone to waste. In fact, I want to thank you for being the best that you could while still alive.

Watching home videos from the past make me sob like a baby, but only because the love you had for me is so apparent through them. I hope all that I have done for you, excluding our arguments, were enough to let you rest in peace and have an enjoyable life. I cherish the memories we made together and keep them locked away in a special place in my heart. It fills the giant hole your passing on left behind. I still remember how even until your dying day I was your "Barney girl", and that will never change. Your singing will always be existent in my mind.

Even as I write this I shed tears. I miss you more than anything and would give up anything in the world to have you back. We went through hell and back together, and your spirit and the memories you left behind keep me going through the most difficult of times.

Thank you.

And I'm sorry that mere words will never be enough to reach you way up in the sky.

Until we meet again,

Daddy's princess-- Perla

I love you. I miss you.
