“ Although this was something we knew was coming, it is still not easy once the time has come. I find comfort in knowing that she is no longer in pain & at peace with her soul in a better place where she is able to watch over all of us.

My Nana was so smart, strong, witty and generous. I am so thankful for all that she did for me and taught me. She helped teach me life lessons that helped me become the woman I am today. Not to mention that she raised my mother who is the best I could ever ask for and shows me unconditional love.

The vacations spent with her in North Carolina are unforgettable and the memories are timeless. Those are the memories of her I will cherish forever.

I also cannot forget how much it drove her nuts to have food go to waste. To the point that I started paying for my own meals at 13. It did teach me to be more mindful of wasting food and the importance of not taking things we have for granted.

I am so inspired by her strength/courage she had to preserve and become a judge in a time when women were not taken very seriously. I am motivated by her passion for learning new things and want to soak up as much knowledge as I can in my lifetime to share with her when we meet again.

You will forever be in my heart, I love you Nana.
